

I Bought a Robot!

So fun this is, although it's pricey,
My new robot makes my life quite spicy!

Don't know for sure, who invents these machines;
My floor is scrubbed and my house he cleans!

I call it a he, but the gender, not known,
It seems quite formal, no way, not a clone!

This creature is smart, and knowledge is the key,
I call her a she, when the back rub's for me.

She drives my car, never missing a turn,
I don't even drive, seems so hard to learn.

Everywhere they are, the robots I mean,
They visit, they talk, this much I have seen!

I've heard people say, the world they will run,
It's hard to believe, they are all so fun.

They're quite sophisticated, they look like us,
You buy online; they're delivered on a bus.

They walk right off, on your door they knock.
They are just like humans, the way they talk.

I own only one, with a very low price,
I hope for better, it would be so nice.

Non violent robot, this one I like,
No bodyguard for me, just take a hike.

Many choices when you order, some standards, not par.
Mine, has good morals, so happy, we are.

I was talking last week, to my human friend,
Robots want to vote, a message they send.

Equal, to us, a thought they can't detain,
Intelligent for sure, they passed the human brain.

Peaceful demonstrations, they're having on the street,
Alarming rumors I have heard, here I can't repeat.

The weekends approaching, we continue, with life,
Upstate, New York, we travel with no strife.

My job, is secure, and I have no major loss,
Although I hear next Monday, a robot is my boss!!

Written by James Leach - Wichita, KS
Illustrated by Olga Trushina

